The embezzler who duped a community

March 2, 2003 – 11.00am

A solicitor has gone to his grave amid revelations that he fleeced his family, friends and clients of more than $5million to fund a secret double life.

Edmund Fredericks was seen as a pillar of the community until the Law Society discovered the investment funds he had been borrowing were supporting alcohol and gambling addictions.

Law Society receiver Jean Sayer confirmed that since being appointed to Fredericks's Lidcombe-based practice in August last year, she had become aware of 70 people who had collectively lost $5million – and possibly more.

“The borrowing occurred over several years, although it got much worse over the past 18 months,” Mrs Sayer said.

“Some of the victims were Fredericks's school friends, others knew him through church, through family or through word of mouth. Some were clients of his law firm but many were actually from his own background: Ukrainian migrants who, in speaking the same language, regarded him as a role model.”

Mrs Sayer warned that while the Law Society possessed a solicitors' fidelity fund, many victims could end up penniless because Fredericks convinced them to hand over cash.

"A large percentage of the missing millions was delivered in cash and there are many people who, in trusting him, walked away with little to no documentation," she said.

Fredericks's web of deceit has shattered countless lives including that of Mark Styles, who is wheelchair-bound after breaking his neck 13 years ago.

Mr Styles, 41, said: "I gave Fredericks $85,000 of my compensation payout to purchase me a farm in the country.

He told me he had located the perfect place near Tamworth. I now know that was a lie to extract more cash from me. I'm now forced to live at my parents' house, in which I've effectively been a prisoner since the accident."

Fredericks was born in Germany shortly after World War II and moved to Australia with his family when he was young.

He opened Eddie Fredericks & Co in Lidcombe in the early 1970s. During the next 30 years he established a loyal client base and became a popular Catholic Church figure, using his knowledge of law to help hundreds of migrants settle in.

By the time he branched out into investment management five years ago, he controlled the trust of an entire community.

Offering between 12 and 30 per cent interest, he had no shortage of takers.

But in August last year, one of his clients contacted the Law Society, saying a $20,000 investment loan hadn't been repaid. Two days later, Fredericks's law certificate was suspended and a receiver was appointed.

In September last year he sold his Sandringham waterfront mansion for $2.6 million, but friends say he continued to drink and gamble heavily.

On February 20, he died of a heart attack, aged 56.

On Wednesday, angry creditors learned of his unadvertised funeral at Rookwood Cemetery.

Retired NSW police officer Ken Sawkins, who lost $26,500, was one silent protester who mingled with mourners.

"I've been chasing him since last July," he said. "Fortunately for him, this was the closest I got."

Maryse Kutschukian was also present after being forced to take her mother out of an old people's home. "He stole $12,500 from me and the worst thing was that he knew about my plight," she said.

Fredericks's former lawyer Greg Walsh said his client had suffered "a lonely, shameful death".

NEW POLICE HELP

Bankstown policeman, Const. Chris McIntosh recently took charge of a gleaming new patrol bike and although it is capable of hitting 125 miles an hour represents safety for members of the public. Const. McIntosh told last week how he chased a speeding motorist some time ago with the car reaching more than 90 miles an hour on Hume Highway between Woodville Road and Yagoona. Const. McIntosh was riding a bike which has since been disposed of by the Police Department. If he had had the new cycle he now rides the chase would have been over earlier and thus danger to the public would have been reduced. The new machine is a Honda 750 of four cylinders and no car on Australian roads could out run or out manoeuvre it. Const. McIntosh has been riding motor cycles for eight years, five of them with the Police Department.

The bike is two seconds faster than the latest Phase three Falcon GTHO over a standing quarter mile and reaches 105 miles an hour from rest in 12.6 seconds. It weighs about 530 pounds with large disc brake at the front and a five speed gearbox.

Bankstown policeman, Constable Chris McINTOSH recently took charge of a gleaming new patrol bike and although it is capable of hitting 125 miles an hour, represents safety for members of the public. Constable McINTOSH told last week how he chased a speeding motorist some time ago with the car reaching more than 90 miles an hour on Hume Highway between Woodville Rd and Yagoona. Constable McINTOSH was riding a bike which has since been disposed of by the Police Department. If he had had the new cycle he now rides, the chase would have been over earlier and thus danger to the public would have been reduced. The new machine is a Honda 750 of four cylinders and other car on Australian roads could out run or out manoeuvre it. Constable McINTOSH has been riding motor cycle for eight years, five of them with the Police Department. The bike is two seconds faster than the latest Phase three Falcon GTH0 over a standing quarter mile and reaches 105 miles an hour from rest in 12.6 seconds. It weights about 530 pounds with large disc brake at the front and live speed gearbox.

Shortly after 9.30am on 22 September, 1973 Constable McIntosh was riding a Police Special Traffic Patrol solo motor cycle from Bankstown Police Station to Lakemba. As he was travelling along Wattle Street a panel van travelling in the opposite direction made a right turn in front of the police cycle. Constable McIntosh was unable to avoid a collision and the cycle struck the side of the van. The constable died as a result of injuries received in the collision.

The constable was born in 1946 and joined the New South Wales Police Force on 8 August, 1966. At the time of his death he was attached to the Traffic Branch.

Unfortunately my computer system has become weak and can no longer stand the strain I place upon it.

In order to get my systems up and running again, I have invested $6k in a new computer system which is currently being built and I would expect that a lot of the notices I place on the system, will be devoid of a lot of information that I usually include; until my new system arrives and my databases and photos are transferred across.

This might not be completed until late February 2022.

Scotty, so long ago mate, solo cycle course in the middle of winter 1998; rain, sleet, snow and just a little bit of sunshine; and, most of all, four weeks with a great bunch of blokes. All of us, a lot younger then, in what seems like a very different time; when a pair of king gee overalls, a standard issue leather jacket, some elastic sided baxter boots, a pair of leggings almost identical to those worn by the light horse in WW1, and whatever gear you could borrow from one of the certified cyclists back at work, were considered safe enough to wear as we scooted around the country side.

Precious memories, even more precious now.

Whatever the cause, I'm so sorry to hear you couldn't stay around. Whenever our paths crossed, you always had a smile. May that continue to be the case wherever you find yourself now.

RIP my friend.

This is a photo of Linda & Ian Mitselburg's grandfather, John James "Jack" Duncan. He was a mounted policeman in Wilcannia in the late 1920s.

We are not sure of where the photo was taken, as he was also stationed in White Cliffs, Broken Hill, Menindee, Howlong, Wentworth and Ivanhoe during his time in the police.

If you have an information that you can give us, it would be greatly appreciated.

Upon joining the NSWPF, Jack was described as:

5' 8.5" tall & 10 stone 8 lb whereas on the 26 June 1935 he was 5' 9" tall & 12 stone 1 lb.

Brown hair and eyes, Dark complexion. He was a native of Adaville near Moree, NSW, and was Single – although he married on the 17 April 1928 and he was previously employed as a Station Hand. He was Methodist.

He sat his Constable 1st Class Examination on the 5 October 1934. He had his First Aid Certificate and was Certified as 'Competent' in relation to driving motor vehicles.
