Resident questions council rate figures

SAM NORRIS

13 Nov 2013, 4 a.m.

UNIMPRESSED: Bolwarra resident Doug Preston

Maitland City Council has been called out on the maths behind a rate increase worth millions.

A pamphlet outlining the extent of potential rate rises has landed in letter boxes across Maitland and Doug Preston, for one, has questioned the full impact.

“The figures are very rubbery and something stinks,” Mr Preston said.

The average urban residential rates notice, based on a $148,000 land valuation, would climb 8.94 per cent annually from $986.54 to $1796.32 – an 82 per cent cumulative increase. Not 62 per cent as council has published.

Council defended the difference as a matter of reporting methods.

“Council acknowledges there are different views as to how the percentage increases should be expressed,” council’s acting general manager Bernie Mortomore said in a statement to the Mercury.

“Council has been active in distributing as much information as possible on both the increase proposed and the services to be provided by council over the period.”

The pamphlet is part of council's community consultation, which includes 10am and 6pm public meetings today at the town hall, on proposed rate increases.

The rate rise would affect business, farming and residential landholders, with successive increases over seven years starting in July 2014.

Mr Preston estimated the increase would likely hit ratepayers even harder when the Valuer-General reviewed property values in 2014 and 2017.

"Even if it's a conservative 3 per cent it will add about $100 a year and the end result will be more like $2000," he said.

The proposed rate increase is the product of surveys to gauge what services residents wanted and what they were prepared to pay as council faced a $92 million deficit within 10 years.

"I don't agree with council's argument that rates must increase," Mr Preston said.

But council said it had worked hard to communicate the proposed increases clearly.

"Council has been active in distributing as much information as possible on both the increase proposed and the services to be provided by council over the period," Mr Mortomore said

Patients mortgaging homes to pay for life-saving drugs

June 23, 2013 8:00am

Homes mortgaged for life-saving drugs

PATIENTS in Eastern Europe and even poverty stricken Greece and Italy are getting access to lifesaving medicines ahead of people in Australia, who in some cases are being forced to remortgage their homes to afford the costly treatments.

As critical government subsidies are refused or delayed in Federal Cabinet, two pharmaceutical companies have dramatically decided they won't reapply for a subsidy after being knocked back up to seven times.

Lowest number of drugs placed on PBS in 20 years

Their decision has left patients who need the life-extending melanoma treatment Zelboraf facing a $9,400 a month bill for treatment.

Meanwhile, the small number of people with the rare Pompe's Disease which impairs muscle function and reduces life expectancy are expected to afford $400,000 a year for the treatment Myozyme.

And other crucial medicines which have been approved for subsidy by an independent expert government committee are months later still waiting for cabinet to approve the funding.

Former policeman Doug Preston risked death if he waited for Cabinet to approve subsidy for his $3,500 a month prostate cancer treatment Zytiga. He had to remortgage his house to find the money.

"If I hadn't done that I would have got past the no return point, my back would have decayed, my legs would have crumbled, I would be bed bound and waiting for death," he said, explaining that he has a new lease of life since he started the drug.

Zytiga was approved for subsidy by the Pharmaceutical Benefits Advisory Committee in March, July and November 2012 but the drug company was initially unhappy with the price it was being offered, delaying the subsidy approval.

A new anti-clotting medicine Pradxa was approved for subsidy two years ago and then again in March but 100,000 stroke patients who could benefit from it are still waiting for cabinet to fund it.

Under an agreement the government has with the medicines industry it has six months to approve a medicine if it is approved for subsidy and a price agreement is reached with the company.

The knock-backs and delays come as a study commissioned by pharmaceutical lobby group Medicines Australia found last month that the number of new medicines placed on the nation's drug subsidy scheme was the lowest in 20 years in 2011-12.

Just 15 new medicines were added to the scheme that year, 40 per cent fewer than the 20-year average of 25 new drugs a year, the Centre for Strategic Economic Studies found.

Many Australians get free access to breakthrough new drugs through clinical trials but the number of new clinical trials approved in Australia is also down 30 per cent in the past six years.

Medicines Australia chief Brendan Shaw says patients waiting for cabinet to approve funding for their medicines are now worried the caretaker period where government ceases entering contracts during the election may further delay subsidies.

Medical Oncology Group of Australia chair Professor Gary Richardson says Australia's drug approval system is out of date and needs to be reviewed.

"We are now falling behind Eastern European countries with the availability of medicines," he said.

Drugs should be reimbursed earlier and monitored for five years after which their performance and price should be reassessed, he said.

Dr Shaw says the pharmaceutical industry wants all parties to agree after the election to a new framework for approving medicine subsidies that will speed up the process and provide certainty.

Memorial held today for beloved Police Dog Waco

May 24, 2017 2:19 pm/in National /by Shanee Dobeson

A memorial for police dog Waco, who died after suffering heat exhaustion while trying to track down offenders in Deception Bay in February, has been held today.

Commissioner Ian Stewart joined Dog Squad officers at the QPS Animal Memorial in Oxley to honour and pay tribute to the beloved pup.

During the memorial, PD Waco's handler (Senior Constable Stephenson) spoke fondly of his partner saying Waco was dearly missed by him and his family.

"Waco was my first police dog and we worked together as a team for seven years," Waco's handler said.

"He never hesitated to protect me and for that I will be forever grateful."

During his time, PD Waco was responsible for locating missing people and hundreds of offenders for numerous offences ranging from armed robberies and unlawful woundings to break and enters.

Commissioner Stewart said “We remember PD Waco today with fondness and gratitude for the ultimate sacrifice he gave in serving the Queensland community.”

Waco is the first working animal recognised as passing on duty since the establishment of the QPS Animal Memorial in December 2014.

RIP Wilson,

Thank You for your service 🥺 ????End of Watch – Wilson

Today we sadly say farewell to Drug Detection Dog Wilson. Wilson moved to the NT from the Australian Federal Police in November 2013.

He took up duty in Alice Springs, where he worked diligently to stop the flow of drugs into the NT, which included policing the cross border jurisdictions.

Looking for a seachange, Wilson moved to Darwin in September 2016 where he served the Greater Darwin region, including the remote communities of the Top End.

Wilson was involved in drug seizures on a daily basis including several large scale busts across the NT.

Sadly, last week, Wilson was diagnosed with an aggressive form of cancer that was beyond treatment.

Wilson, a tireless worker, a true gentleman, you will be sorely missed.

New Recruits Join the Darwin Dog Operations Unit

Friday 13-Dec-2013 10:37

Drug Detection Dogs April, Astra and Cougar were born and bred by the Australian Customs Narcotic Detection Dogs breeding program in Melbourne.

After completing the Australian Customs puppy walker scheme, they passed all testing to become Drug Detection Dogs. The next phase of training for the puppies was the basic drug detection course undertaken by the Australian Federal Police (AFP) K9 unit in Canberra.

Senior Constable Tyron Bellman and Senior Constable Luke Lamb have joined the Darwin Dog Operations Unit, and attended the AFP K9 training facility in Canberra for 10 weeks, returning with five new dogs. Two dogs, Wilson and Yeti, have been posted to Alice Springs. April, Astra and Cougar will remain in Darwin.

Drug Detection Dog Cougar has been re-teamed with Senior Constable Richard O'Brien who will retire his operational Drug Detection Dog, Puma, sometime next year.

The Dog Operation Unit Instructor, Sergeant David Young, recently completed the re-teaming of Wilson and Yeti in Alice Springs, and has spent the last week in Darwin with the AFP Instructors completing the training for April, Astra and Cougar.

Labradors April, Astra and Cougar are all two years of age. They have been trained to locate methamphetamine, ecstasy, cocaine and heroin.

"All five new dogs have shown impressive skill in drug detection and I am very pleased with the quality of these dogs," said Sergeant David Young.

"April, Astra and Cougar have adapted well from the pristine environment of the AFP K9 training facility in Canberra to the Darwin environment, acclimatising to the humidity and heat without any issues.

"The heat and humidity is a big factor at the moment and the dogs are working extremely well. All going to plan these dogs will be able to serve the Darwin and remote areas of the Northern Territory for the next six to seven years and will potentially detect many illegal substances."

April, Astra and Cougar will complete their NT Police induction training this week, officially graduating at the rank of Drug Detection Dog, attached to the Darwin Dog Operations Unit.

Police seize drugs 'destined for WA leavers'

Posted 18 Nov 2016, 7:12pm

WA Police have seized more than 150 packages containing illicit drugs, in a four day blitz in the lead up to Leaver's week.

The packages contained mostly methamphetamine, but also ecstasy, cocaine, LSD, cannabis and a range of other drugs.

Acting Commander John Ballantyne said many of the intended recipients would now face charges including possession and possession with intent to supply.

"Some of the intended recipients have been identified as being 17 and 18 years old, so it is not unreasonable to suggest that some of those drugs could have been destined for Leavers," he said.

"What I do know is that none of those drugs will make it to Leavers."

The organised crime squad and canine unit were involved in the operation targeting drugs sent through the post.

Police said they were still trying to determine whether the drugs were purchased online and whether they came from interstate, overseas or a combination of both.

The purpose of the operation was to limit the amount of drugs on the street during Leavers, which begins on Monday.

The seizures ranged from small packages to larger ones, including 100 ecstasy tablets, 84 grams of amphetamine, 87.5 grams MDMA powder and 100 LSD tabs.

Acting Commander Ballantyne once again urged parents to talk to their children about the dangers associated with illicit drugs.

“It’s up to parents to talk to their leavers now to make sure they make the right decisions, not the wrong ones, a bad decision now could lead to implications into the future which could have far reaching consequences.”

WA Police officers awarded Australia Day Honours policing medals

PERTHNOW,
January 26, 2015 1:24pm

FIVE of the State’s police officers have been recognised in this year’s Australia Day Honours.

Superintendent John Ballantyne, Superintendent Brad Royce, Inspector Kerry French, Inspector Kim Travers and Sergeant Jodie Pearson have all been awarded the prestigious Australian Police Medal.

Superintendent John Ballantyne

Superintendent Ballantyne has served the WA Police with distinction for 37 years.

During this time he has led the way in metropolitan and regional community policing, state and national criminal investigations, corporate project management, overseas peacekeeping and district management.

Monday, 30 April 2007. 08:33 (AWST)

New inspectors join Pilbara district office

Two new inspectors have joined the Pilbara police district office in Karratha.

Ken Nicolson will be supervising police stations in West Pilbara.

John Ballantyne will oversee crime management and governance.

They are replacing Inspector Craig Lockhart who has moved to Perth and Inspector Phil Clews who is moving to Broome.

Inspector Ballantyne has just returned from a stint with the Australian Federal Police in the Solomon Islands and East Timor.

His role in the Pilbara will be to “police the police”.

Inspector Ballantyne says his new role will provide a challenge.

“It’s to ensure that the police within the Pilbara adhere to the policies and the procedures of the WA Police Service and indeed the statute laws set by Government,” he said.
